PROFILE

I'm a web developer from Folkestone with a background in art and music.

I started learning web development in 2016 using free online resources, and began working professionally within a design agency in 2018.

This work satisfies some of my key drives: for conceptual problem solving, for creating compelling things, and for sharing with others.

I love learning, I love the small technical details, and I love steering a project from conception through to completion.
